MESSAGE FROM SUPERIOR GENERAL

Be Grateful Always!

Being thankful to God for all his blessings should be one of the most distinctive marks of a joyous Missionaries of Faith. We must not allow in our lives a spirit of ingratitude because nothing will do more to restore the joy of our faith than a true spirit of gratitude. We should not let a day go by without thanking God for everything.

I would like to propose some points in order to continue to grow in our spirit of gratitude for a better relationship with God and with others.

- > * we need to learn in our daily lives to thank God for everything that we have.
- > * we need to give thanks for all our brothers and sisters around us.
- > * we need to cultivate a spirit of gratitude even in the midst of trials and persecutions.

BE grateful

ON-GOING FORMATION CORNER

A REVITALISING EXPERIENCE

-Fr. Jaison Kalathiparambil mf

Church has an integral view of human life and considers it as a vocation, accompanying it right from its birth to death. Enriching formative accompaniment is necessary as humans are endowed with talents and gifts on one hand, and on the other many limitations and weaknesses. It is very much true also in the case of religious vocation. Just like a plant nurtured in a nursery, it is nurtured in a formation house during its initial period, helping it to “achieve a serene and creative interior synthesis between strengths and weaknesses”. In our Congregation, by providing the appropriate formative accompaniment during this period, we aim at forming our charismatic identity. In this period, a missionary of faith imbibes the right human – spiritual - communitarian values and integrates the necessary elements of vocational conviction. Priestly ordination is the sacramental completion of this specific divine-human project.

Need for ongoing formation

The event of priestly ordination is sometimes presumed as “the arrival point” or as the moment of the release of a ‘finished product’ into public, like a machine or automobile into market. Industrial revolution brought in a very dynamic approach to formation changing this general static concept. The need for continuous updating became urgent in the post-industrial society as technology developed, giving rise to a knowledge society. To be productive meant to be capable of continuous updating. On the other hand, humanistic anthropology provided the theoretic background for an evolutive approach focusing on the growth and maturation of the human person throughout his existence.

Repercussions of such socio-cultural changes were felt in every ambit of society hence also in the Church. Vatican II recognised the need for priests to keep alive their spirit to be competent to face the diverse pastoral challenges. Various documents were emanated by the Holy See laying out the principles of priestly formation and itinerary of post-ordination (ongoing) formation. Priestly ordination, thus, was not to be considered anymore as an arrival port or a full-stop to the formation project. It is a pivotal point in the life of a formee, demanding a change of perspective and an enlivening approach to the same project of life. It is for this reason, we have one single General Order of Formation (Ratio formationis) in the congregation denoting that formative accompaniment begins right from entering the stage of initial formation till the end of one’s life.

One single journey of discipleship

Often the question is raised by at least some priests: “is not the formation received in the formation house sufficient?”; “why are they disturbing us again with all these programs?”; “what problem did I create for me to undergo such a renewal course?”. Such questions arise from a fragmented vision of formation. It must be understood in its entirety and singularity, as something that lasts throughout one’s life. The new Ratio fundamentalis “The gift of priestly vocation” affirms the unity of formation (cfr. RF 53) calling it as “a missionary journey of discipleship” (RF 54). It needs various stages – different stages in the initial formation and various experiences in the stage of ongoing formation - respecting the evolutive rhythm of each singular vocation (cfr. RF 54 – 88). Pope Francis calls them as “two aspects of the same reality.” Pastores dabō vobis founds ongoing formation on the admonition of St. Paul to Timothy to “continually rekindle” the gift of vocation (cfr. 1Tim. 4:14; 2Tim. 1:6) because “time cools the generous dedication of the beginning”. Adopting such a disposition, one can appreciate, accept and access willingly a proposed itinerary of ongoing formation. Having completed the juridical and charismatic renewal, the General Governance of Missionaries of Faith is all set to commence various programs of “ongoing formation” for its members. When each individual member rekindles his charismatic spirit, our Congregation is revitalised, and our apostolate will be vibrant.

Ongoing formation: sum of some programs?

Another area of great doubt and confusion is the itinerary of ongoing formation. Often it is reduced to the sum of some refresher programs or some expert input sessions or the periodical retreats or meetings. The difficulty lies in the fact that the initial formation has specific stages with clearly defined objectives and stipulated time frame while ongoing formation has only a departure point (priestly ordination) without any obliging principle or stable structure. The quinquennium of the newly ordained, organization of different programs according to the different age or target groups or remedial programs for specific crisis stricken etc. are some attempts at giving some clarity and structure to it. Despite all these the cloud of confusion and the reluctance to accept it ails the arena of ongoing formation.

The mentality of being a constant learner is the remedy to the situation. This creates an inner disposition (docibilitas) of continually learning to learn. It expresses the idea of a formative process in which the subject plays an active role. It implies that after the ordination one is disposed to learn from every life experience i.e., from the school of life. He will be learning from the mistakes of his own and of the others; he will be reading to update his knowledge; he will be pursuing courses of specialization; he will be availing every opportunity of retreat and silence; he will be constant in his prayer life; he will try to be a true pastor of the souls entrusted to his care; he will be a true missionary of faith according to his charismatic identity etc.

In this itinerary of self – formation, various programs do come handy to give expert guidance and inputs. They offer the required content and adequate method to deal with concrete questions and difficult situations. It also helps one to take preventive measures to common difficulties. In short, they are some of the instruments of ongoing formation. So, let's not fall into the error of limiting it only to the organised programs. Let's be learners in the school of life with the disposition of docibilitas.

Responsibility: mine or the superiors' or the congregation's?

All the three should be the right answer to the question. It is a very tricky issue as all the three can excuse oneself from the responsibility. An individual priest can blame the congregation or the superior for not providing the opportunity, for not organizing programs or not giving the necessary break from the mission to avail such programs. The superior or the congregation can attribute it to the lack of personal interest of the concerned to access the available opportunities. If it is so, then how to carry out the ongoing formation in our Congregation?

The sense of co-responsibility is the solution. Every member is progressing slowly towards the maturity as a true disciple. Maturity in discipleship comes from the constant conversion of heart. Community is the "fertile soil" where a vocation matures (RF 50). It is the duty of the competent superior to discern the need and provide the necessary accompaniment; the responsibility of the members lies in expressing the need for it; Congregation expresses its maternal concern by organizing relevant programs.

In the next article I shall present the principles, methods and means of ongoing formation.

Conclusion

Holy Orders is not an arrival port where ends the formative process. One has to progressively attain the priestly maturity and pastoral charity. Time can cool the initial spirit. St. Paul reminds Timothy to rekindle the spirit of his ordination (cfr. 1Tim. 4:14; 2Tim. 1:6). In our times it is called as ongoing formation and each individual missionary of faith becomes its subject and protagonist. One must play an active role in this lifelong formation experience, availing every opportunity with the spirit of docibilitas. The superiors and the Congregation can provide favorable ambience, experts in the field and periodical programs. With a sense of co-responsibility we can rekindle the true spirit of the gift of our religious vocation. May Mary, Queen of Confessors of faith accompany us on our formative journey!

However, foreseeing certain specific situations our constitutions provide for the formation of candidates to brotherhood (CC. 71 – 76). Regarding their ongoing formation, Solemn profession could be considered as the equivalent of priestly ordination.

A large number of parishioners, men and women religious from different congregations present in the area took part in this procession.

Feast of the Sanctuary of dè Piternis

On the 8th September of each year in Cervaro (FR), there is a great celebration, commemorating the apparition of Our Lady that took place at the end of year 1300 on the slopes of Mount Rachis, where the Our Lady asked a shepherdess to pray and to build a Church. She built a church which is the current diocesan sanctuary dedicated precisely to Our Lady of Piternis. In the Presence of a great crowd of parishioners and devotees, the parish priest Fr. Ignacio Roderik mf crowned the venerated effigy of the patron saint.

The sanctuary of dè Piternis is affiliated to the Papal Basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome. So pilgrims who visit this shrine can receive daily plenary indulgence. The Missionaries of the Faith have been present in this shrine and in the parish of St Mary Magdalene and St Paul since 1995, at present together with the parish priest there are Fr. Francesco Nga Re mf and Fr. Henry Maung mf.

The month of October each year is dedicated to the Most Holy Rosary. This is primarily due to the fact that the liturgical feast of Our Lady of the Rosary is celebrated annually on October 7. It was instituted to honor the Blessed Virgin Mary in gratitude for the protection that she gives the Church in answer to the praying of the Rosary by the faithful.

The feast was introduced by Pope St. Pius V (1504-1572) in the year 1571 to commemorate the miraculous victory of the Christian forces in the Battle of Lepanto on October 7, 1571. The pope attributed more to the "arms" of the Rosary than the power of cannons and the valor of the soldiers who fought there.
